

PRESENTS A SPECIAL SNEAK PREVIEW OF

HEAR AND NOW

After 65 years of silence, Paul and Sally Taylor decide to undergo cochlear implant surgery and explore a totally unfamiliar world--the realm of sound. In this deeply personal memoir, filmmaker Irene Taylor Brodsky documents her deaf parents' complex decision to undergo a controversial medical procedure--the only one that can actually restore a sense.

Join us for a wine and cheese reception honoring Paul and Sally Taylor at 6:00 p.m. and a screening of the documentary at 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday, April 8.

Following the film, Portland-based filmmaker Irene Taylor Brodsky, her parents, and her sister, Lucy Taylor Macaulay, will all be available to take questions from the audience.

Tickets to this special event are $25 and benefit the Tucker-Maxon Oral School (www.tmos.org), a private, not-for-profit school in Southeast Portland that has been teaching children with hearing loss to use spoken language since 1947.

Today, Tucker-Maxon's oral-deaf (non-signing) students benefit from on-site speech therapy and audiology services, innovative teachers, and small classes with hearing peers who model age-appropriate speech.

Free parking will be available at the Broadway Medical Clinic (4212 NE Broadway St.).

Seating is limited, so we recommend that you buy your tickets in advance.
